Hey now,

Anyone creating or have virtual orientations for fall?

If so, can you share the platform you are using and any resources? How you designed the orientation? Learning outcomes, etc?

Leading a team in the library to develop a virtual orientation for the incoming Architecture, Art, Art history and planning students in the fall.

I can share a list with everyone from those that send resources.

Thanks.

Kind regards,

Kai

Hi Kai,

Would love to hear what you learn from colleagues about this! It has been such a wild ride of a year that I haven't yet considered how I'm going to prepare my fall orientations. Thanks for reaching out to the Listserv about this. I also want to embed/create a very brief silly/informal video of me just introducing myself to students on my LibGuide homepages (maybe with a cameo or two of my dog __) to let them know I'm a human who cares about their success.

I hope you're faring well despite these difficult times.

Sincerely,

-Jenna

Just starting on all this
Faculty slow to respond yet in terms of this
Imagine voice over PowerPoints- I have some to edit and then will add voice
Zoom and Teams and screen sharing

Nothing special that I can get to right now

Hello Kai,
I will be using a combination of Zoom and Prezi. I am building the Prezi as we speak. My goal is to create an almost virtual walk through of the library so the students will see and understand that we are a great place to be when they come back to campus in August 2021. I can share it if people are interested.

Have a nice weekend -

Hello Kai,

I will have an online orientation for new graduate students in the Historic Preservation, and Urban Planning Programs, and they are visiting me for 30 minutes together, via Zoom.
At the moment, my goals are for them to takeaway the following:

1. How to reach me
2. How to install the reload button - a feature that allows your browser to mimic on campus internet accessibility. <https://lib.guides.umd.edu/reload-button>
3. How to request books and articles, either through something we call document delivery, curbside pick up, and Interlibrary Loan.
4. A few favorite databases for Preservation and Planning research.

I may use something called Padlet, to let them interact, but also hoping to chat with them briefly.
I am also building some program specific libguides right now.

I would love to hear what everyone else is doing, and also talk if you want to Google Meet or Zoom, or phone call.

Hi:
The website actually just went up yesterday. I based it on the format that LinkedIn Learning uses; I've done some of their courses and I felt the format was great. If you haven't done one, it's basically a series of short videos, and each topic is separated out, which makes it really easy to go back and look at them again. So here's the website:

<https://www.lib.ncsu.edu/guide/design/basics>

I used some of the online tutorials that the library already had and I made more videos myself (after learning iMovie from LinkedIn Learning). The sound quality isn't always great because I was recording at home from my laptop, but they are all closed captioned, which I hope will help. The content was really intended to be the basics; how to find and get a book or article or image; it's mostly all about procedures.

I've got another one in the works for the graduate students, but that isn't up yet. It will probably be up in a couple weeks, and I can send that link then if you want it. Hope this helps. thanks!

Hi Kai,

I am interested. 😊

Is this for students as well? I am a student Cuesta College/ San Luis Obispo nearly finished with a degree and looking for work.

Additionally, I hold a Bachelors of Science in Graphic Communications / design reproduction from California Polytechnic/ San Luis Obispo.

An arts librarian position would be ideal.

Hello Kai,

We did a small video to introduce ourselves to the incoming class as part of orientation. The video is being uploaded to a platform called <https://www.comevo.com>. The library has nothing to do with the platform, I'm assuming our college purchased a license for it.

Hope you are great. We need an adventure hike sometime.

Best,

Gabrielle

Ps if you want to see our video get back to me.

Gladly!

Hi Kai,

I created mine using powerpoint. I created a presentation and then recorded audio narrataion for each slide. I think this is the way that gives you the most control. It also feels pretty comfortable if you're used to making PowerPoint presentations. Beyond that, I've attached a write up of tips for creating recorded presentations. It's everything I leaned from creating my recorded orientation. Let me know if you have any questions.

Best,
Salima

Dear Kai,

Hope you are safe and well!

We are in the process of finishing up our virtual orientation. We are building it in LibGuides with embedded Vimeo tutorial videos.

Here is what we have so far, and hope to have videos on the pages without them by next week:
